Nexus learners take part in science expo

On 13 August, Nexus Primary School learners from Harrismith took part in the Eskom Expo for Young Scientists which was held at the University of the Free State, Qwaqwa Campus where they showcased their science research projects.

The learners who represented the school were Mbali Ngozo, Neo Khiba, Palesa Moloi and Nyakallo Moloi who were mentored by Coding Instructor Bongani Ratia. The project was called "automated watering system" which was invented by Grade 6 learners Ngozo and Khiba.

According to Ngozo, the project came about after realizing that plants in the school's office will dehydrate during the school holidays when the general workers who take care of the office plants are on holiday. The learners decided to use coding and robotics skills to take care of the office flowers. Khiba and Ngozo won a gold award for their project.

The school also participated in the engineering category where Palesa Moloi and Nyakallo Moloi invented the Nexus Robot Screener and won a bronze award.

School Principal Fikile Maria Mohaladi said she is very proud of the learners.
